Promote Healthy Living

A community garden gives all generations an opportunity to be involved and learn. At the very core of a healthy diet is understanding where your food comes from.

A market place gives people the opportunity to connect from many places. While the focus will be produce and foods there will also be places to buy handmade art or other goods.

Dedicated spaces to sit and eat and be together will happen above the market place and near the garden. This large open space will make it easy for groups of any size to come together.
